Ullswater. This is the second largest of the English lakes. It is divided into three reaches, the first a mile long, the second three miles long, the third three miles long. The green crags of White Knoll and Arthur's Pike are on the lowest reach, the steep and beautiful slope of Birk Fell is on the middle one, and Helvellyn's fine summit looms over the third reach.

Dear Reg. I am yours staying in this district, beautiful, enjoying it very much. The weather has not been good and I have many times wished you were here. Jack has my bicycle over here because the road in this district is dreadful with terrible hills. Hope you are keeping well. Yours sincerely, Bill.
